

CLL Support

Have you recently been diagnosed with CLL (chronic lymphocytic leukaemia)?

Are you looking for advice from someone who knows all about CLL?

We are CLL Support and we can help you.

What is CLL?

CLL is a cancer of a particular type of white blood cell called a B lymphocyte. It causes these lymphocytes to grow which puts pressure on the other key elements of your blood system.

CLL is a complex and individual condition and can take a while to get your head around when first diagnosed.

It often takes quite some time to understand how CLL may affect you. A good place to start is to have a look at our website www.cllsupport.org.uk

The next important point to make is that this is a "chronic" condition so that's why in most cases your doctor will advise that you should "watch and wait". Not an easy thing to take on board but that's what we can talk to you about.

We also offer support for Small Lymphocytic Lymphoma (SLL), which is managed in the same way as CLL.

What treatments are there?

There have been real improvements in treatment for CLL over recent years, with several new drugs becoming available. These have significantly improved the effectiveness of treatment and have extended options and quality of life for CLL patients. So, there continues to be real progress.

This is an area that is changing rapidly, and we work with consultants, the pharmaceutical industry and government to bring the best knowledge and advice to our members.

How can we help YOU?

We are a patient-led UK charity run by unpaid volunteers who are all CLL patients or close to someone who has CLL. So we do know what you are dealing with.

This is what we set out to do for all CLL patients.

- We provide up-to-date and accessible information about CLL and the range of treatments currently available plus the latest research into the care and treatment of CLL.
- We do this through our website, newsletters and telephone helpline.
- We bring you together with other CLL patients to give you opportunities to share understanding and personal experience by arranging member conferences across the UK.
- We also act as a voice for CLL patients, representing their interests with the pharmaceutical industry, clinicians, NHS, cancer care policy and drugs regulation authorities, funding and commissioning groups, and politicians.
- Finally, we seek to promote awareness of CLL, and the role of the CLL Support, amongst health care providers and decision makers, providers of non-healthcare products and services, other blood cancer patient groups and the wider public. So please join CCL Support for free, help us help each other and support our fight against CLL.

Live well with CLL.
You can still have a good life.
